Mission

The Robotics grant is designed to encourage Seventh-day Adventist schools to provide a robotics program that introduces students to the fun and excitement of using science, technology, engineering and math while building self-confidence, valuable employment skills and contributing to improve society at large. Robotics challenges participants to higher level thinking skills in the areas of science and engineering. Alongside adult mentors, the teams solve problems while building robots with sound engineering practices and rapid prototyping. This grant is designed to assist schools in support of the Pacific Union Conference STEM initiative.
